Mass Rock Sunday

“The old church at Coniamstown and the present church at Rossglass were both built before 1745. Previous to the building of these churches Mass was celebrated at the Mass Rock, a little to the west of the site of the Coniamstown church. At this Mass Rock the altar and reredos (screen behind the altar) were cut out of solid rock. Cut into the rock there were two little triangular recesses for holding cruets and other Mass requisites. This Mass Rock still exists today and Mass continues to be celebrated there. Mass was also celebrated at the Quarry at the Green Road. During the celebration of Mass at these places guards were stationed at the Twelve Acre Hill, at Ballydargan Mill and at Carrabane Mountain to give notice and an early warning of the approach of priest hunters.” (John McGrath)

This year Mass Rock Sunday at Coniamstown will take place on Sunday 25th June at 3.00pm.
